During the severe storm Saturday evening lightning struck the large barn at the Lyman Schnurrenberger farm north of town. His son Ira, who is living on the farm, was away at the time it was struck but arrived home soon after the fire started. Wilfred Reesbeck of Salem, who has been helping on the farm, was in the barn at the time milking the cows. The cattle were all stunned by the shock and fell in their stalls. The young man also received a severe shock. When he came to he removed all the stock and a part of the farm implements. The remainder with the year's crops, was destroyed. Insurance was only partial. Ira Schnurrenberger has been in ill health for some time and expected to leave the farm this fall a change of climate.

LIKE IN "FLANDERS FIELDS"

"In Flanders fields the popples

Poppies Bloom in Kearney, N. J., in Soil That Was Transported From Beautiful France, grow," but not only in Flanders fields. Over in the Federal Shipbuilding company's yards in Kearney, N. J., French and Belgian popples bloom with the manue brave colors they showed on the battlefields overseas. How did they get there? Well, that's a long story. Remember when our troop ships were speeding over the waters guarded by swift destroyers? And when other vessels were making the trip carrying food and other supplies to the brave armies overseas? Well, no troops were homeward bound in those days, but the vessels did not come back with empty holds. Instead as ballast they used soil from Belgium and France. What to do with this ballast when the ships touched New York was a problem until officials of the shipbuilding concern in Kearney asked for the soll for filling in purposes. As a result more than 100 barge loads were transferred from transports docked in Hoboken and carried to the yards, where the soll was used to fill a sort of trench caused by the removal of a pipe line. And there the popples have been blooming for more than a year unnoticed, except now and then by a passing ship worker. They have flourished in their transplanted home perhaps because they are used to trench life. Intermixed with the blood-red popples are French daisies, their petals blunter than the American variety, and with several blossoms growing from each stem. Probably these newcomers would still be unnoticed if the other day some one hadn't stopped the young son of the shipyard's chief of police to ask where he picked his scarlet nosegay. "These?" remarked the boy, holding the flowers out for observation. "Oh, these are Belgian popples that grow wild down in my father's yards. Want to get some? I'll show you."

How Was He to Know? The most embarrassing moment in my life came when I was a junior in high school. As in the case of most boys of that age, I had a girl friend I escorted to and from various events. One evening we attended a lecture given by a prominent lawyer. After it was over I took the girl home and we went into the library to study for an exam. Soon her parefits arrived and were taking their wraps off in the hall when her mother called to us and asked us how we liked the lecture. I immediately spoke up: "Well, I didn't think much of it." No sooner had the words been spoken than in walked the speaker with the rest of the folks. Unknown to me he was to stay at their home over night.-Chicago Tribune.

Strong "Make-Believe." Donald and his sister Helen delight in playing house together. Each child has a house in different parts of the same room. Helen was making a call on Donald, and Donald invited her to sit down on the only chair he had in his house, while he sat down on a small bucket, which he had turned upside down. Finally Donald grew restless sitting on the upturned bucket, and in the course of the conversation he asked: "How long are you going to stay?"

"I think I'll stay all night." Donald twisted around on the little bucket which was becoming a more uncomfortable seat all the while, and said quite emphatically: "Well, 1f you're going to stay all night, I guess you'll have to give me that chair, cus I can't stand this bucket."

Plan to Get Gold From Sand. It has been known for many years that Adirondack sand contains gold deposits that will run from five to seven dollars per ton. No practical process was known by which the gold could be obtained at a profit, although several attempts have been made in various sections of the mountains. Now, however, it is reported that a process has been perfected which will insure a profit, and that two large mills will soon be erected in the northern

Adirondacks. Each will be equipp

Suggestion Put Forward, With Some Evidence, by Correspondent of New York Herald,

IS GOLF REALLY IRISH GAME?

Writing to the New York Herald, a devotee of the "royal game" puts the query "Is golf, after all, an Irish game?" In asking the question it is done with respect and reverence; in no sense to disturb the settled ease and mental poise and satisfaction of ye good Scot or Briton. Why the suggestion, however? Simply this: Ireland was the first of the islands to be reclaimed from Druidism and converted to Christianity. That was in the early Fifth century. After that Scotla or Scotland became Christian-the Sixth century; England in the Eighth and Germany in the Ninth century, and all following and through Irish missionaries. True also that the Scotch and Irish were practically all Celt and one people then and all friendly. Now, then, it is of the old Irish folk-lore that St. Patrick at the famous Druid feast showed (1) that the leg of a bird was larger than a quarter of beef (2) that a dog could kill the bird, and (3) that three leaves could jointly subsist on one stem, and at that feast "there were feats of strength and art all round," and among the games was the game of "Nine Holes," That was the first mention of the nine hole game, of course. It was so played in Ireland for centuries. It was the putting of the ball into each hole of the nine as laid out in the course. Therefore, the question: Was that game the forerunner of its kind in the world. and if so was it the forerunner or keystone of golf?

AIR LIFEBOAT BRITISH IDEA

Craft Designed for Sea Rescue Work Is Soon to Be Given a Definite "Tryout,"

The first lifeboat of the air, which has been built with great secrecy, is to be launched soon in England. After the official trials it will go through a series of tests with the British fleet. If it proves to be satisfactory, a large number of the craft on a much larger scale will be constructed. The design is the outcome of three years of secret research and tests. The flying lifeboat will be able to reach a vessel in distress at a speed of more than 100 miles an hour, and it is claimed that it will be able to ride through the roughest storm with the confident safety of an Atlantic liner.

The boats are able to taxi along the Their seaworthiness is to be tested by sending the first experimental ship out with the navy, where it is to remain at sea for several days without any "mother ship." The wing span of the one now nearing completion is 140 feet. Safety in the most violent sea will come from the resilience of the hull, which is in one piece from stem to stern. this hull strikes a huge wave it gives way slightly in much the same way that a pneumatic tire does when it strikes an obstacle on the road.

Plan Shrines to Burroughs The John Burroughs Memorial association has started its campaign to raise funds to purchase and maintain the various properties of the late naturalist. It is estimated it will take about $36,000 to purchase them, and an additional $4,000 to maintain them the first year. The association intends to maintain the Burroughs properties as the naturalist himself maintained them. His working library, some of his original manuscripts, rifles, shotguns and fishing tackle will be exhibited. It is the opinion of the association that shrines to great men, especially shrines to literary men, are too few, and that the many friends and admirers of John Burroughs will be interested in keeping up the places in which he lived, studied and labored in the 84 years of his life. It hopes to raise funds to maintain these prop-

JOBLESS IN BOSTON SOLD LIKE SLAVES Auctioning off the unemployed is a daily happening from the bandstand on Boston Common, but the men who mount the steps want to be soldwant any kind of work at any kind of pay that would assure them food and shelter. There are few bidders, for the same reason that there are few jobs to be had.

of 1907 some unknown heckler interrupted a speech by a well-known statesman speaking at Cooper Union, New York City, and asked him what a man should do when out of work, penniless and unable to get a job,
"God knows," he said, "I don't if you didn't save anything when you had a job." Governments have never known what to do for a man out of work, for a slave is no more of an asset than any other employee if there is no market for what he can produce

There isn't any special rule one can follow to save money; keep his job, or to have a little saved up for the period when business is low. But this is true: If you throw away your money is true: If you throw away your money for things you don't value, there isn't rouch left for the things you do value.

Look over your expenditures for the last six months. Do they show a fair return for the money spent? Is there a reasonable proportion saved? If not, try decreasing the expenses by better buying and start a savings account with the difference. The Farmers National Bank, Canfield, O.—Adv.
